WASHINGTON, July 21.—The United States has decided to inform Germany that further loss of American lives is a result of German violation of the principles of international law will be regarded as an unfriendly act. The decision is in principle to the effect that the German government will be required to remove the ships of its fleet from destroying an unresisted enemy at sea.The American government will now warn Germany of the importance of this fact. In future transgressions of American rights, the course of action will be to demand that Germany withdraw her fleet from the seas. If she fails to do so, then the American government will be compelled to take steps which will put the American fleet at the front of the strike at once.*ANNEXATION OF THE RUSSIAN ARMIES IS AIM*GRENZEN, July 21.—In view of the German war effort in violation of the rules of international law, the Russian government has issued a decree that the Russian army will be used to defend the frontier of the empire against another nation.*We stand ready now as in the past to consider any complaints or demands of neutrals. THE GOVERNOR'S TOUR.

Some people spend their money in foreign travel; others lay about the seashores or waste their interests among the mountains. In this country, some go west to see the Pacific Coast, and the Panama Expedition; but the slogan of Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh is, "See Pennsylvania First."

The patriotic Pennsylvania executive proposes to make an automobile tour of his own state. The Governor already has arranged a route which includes points of historical and industrial interest. The state highways will be traversed and the resources and needs of the commonwealth carefully noted. The governor desires to get better acquainted with Pennsylvania and its people. It is to be hoped that he will visit Connellsville and learn something about its hospital needs.

The Indiana Times said that the Governor has an ambition to run for President of the United States. He has demonstrated the fact that he is a good runner.

The Uniontown Standard sarcastically suggests that the Democratic Tariff is responsible for the weather. The era of Pure Politics and Politic Language should worry. The Democratic party is responsible for a good many things and it is not going to be permitted to dodge behind the weather.

Once more home has the summer resort claimed for comfort and cheaper living.

The fire hydrant survey of Connellsville was timely and important. Fire hydrants are as complete as possible to be made. No doubt of the city should be beyond the reach of a water line. It is also important that the fire hydrants should be inspected frequently, and this should be done under supervision of city officers.

The third class city ballot case was heard by both judges, a very proper proceeding, and no doubt the verdict will be proper verdict.

The reason that Connellsville always shows up so strong in the campaign returns is that they always include Max Morris' goat," said the Uniontown Herald. Yes, but that long goat makes no headway against the chicken of Coon Hollows.

Connellsville seems to be badly in need of a public benefactor with the willingness and ability to finance several worthy public movements.

Dumb powder mills is growing in spite of the inflation assistance. Powder mills are more understandable than ever since they face the additional danger of being burned down or blown up by foreign sympathizers.

It is a pleasure to note that the new equipment ordered by the B. & O. includes fifty new passenger coaches.

The opening of the Chatanooga by-product plant will be followed with interest, not only because it presents an entirely new form of by-product coke, but because it proposes to make its profits largely from gas recovery. If the natural gas supply of Fayette county should ever fail, the by-product coke proposition would be the first time in the history of the Connellsville coke region become attractive.

Oppressive railroad rates and increasing labor troubles may Ohio coal operators have lost all incentive to continue in business.

Connellsville established Bargain Day, the idea being to early maintain the leadership through Connellsville has better stores and more enterprises and greater facilities than can be had anywhere else in Fayette county.

Sectordale held a parade to advertise the Chautauqua. Connellsville will hold a continuous parade every day and evening.

The American note will be responsive, but whether it will be in harmony with the German notes remains to be seen.

Republicans outside of Connellsville should remember that this is the last day to enroll in order to vote at the primary. See that your name is on the ready list.

Henry Ford declares that people will have better health if they eat less. They will also have better bank accounts and be better able to buy automobiles. In part, they will soon afford to purchase them.

The United States has joined in the movement for the purification of the streams. The movement has been slowish but never entirely stagnant.

The Westmoreland organ whistler every now and then. The Uniontown New Era and Standard, vs Wilson is undoubtedly Ask Champ Clark.

Compt. Supt. Hudson proved that he could at the call of duty agree on one site as well as the other.

Judges from the number of cases reported the country must be in a prospective again.

The Wild Westers protest at being barred out of the fishing river they have contributed so materially to replenishing the streams with fish.

Looking Backward

News of the Past Contained from the Files of The Courier.

FRIDAY, JULY 17, 1885.

The law prohibiting the employment of women on the coke yards becomes effective. The operators point to the fact that women have never been carried on the payrolls of any of the companies, although some of them have been in the habit of helping their husbands fork coke on the yards.

It is rumored that Cornelius Vanderbilt is about to dispose of his holdings in the South Penn railroad to the Pennsylvania interests. Dr. David Bestetter of Pittsburgh, who is interested in the South Penn, denounces the story as an invention of the coke jobbers.

The annual report of the Baltimore & Ohio Employers' Relief Association shows $1,000 benefits paid, ranging from $1 to $1,500.

A severe storm visits the coke region. Dwelling of John Rutherford is damaged to the extent of $150 by being struck by lightning.

The coke syndicate has appointed an Inspector of coke to pass on the quality of the fuel offered for sale.

The new laundry of John K. Brown is under roof.

A new house is being erected on Main street by Lot Rich.

Peter Dooley, the gardener, embarks mountain school teacher to gather raspberries and the young man performs the task with a sythe. The entire patch is demolished.

The following officers are chosen: President, P. S. Newmyer, vice president, J. R. Baldwin; secretary, H. P. Snyder; treasurer, J. S. Metzger; executive committee, J. P. Hoyt, J. D. Frieser, E. Dunn, J. T. McCormick and J. C. McChamian.

Brownsville is excited over a strike on Dunlap's Creek, about a mile from town.

FRIDAY, JULY 18, 1895.

Coke production for the week ending July 17 totalled 150,660 tons. Of the 17,581 events in the region, 15,230 were active and 2,350 idle. This was an increase over the previous week of 1,410 tons.

Shipments for the week totalled 8,805 cars, being an increase of 297 over the week previous, contained as follows: To Pittsburgh and clever this, 2,216; to New York, 2,000; to Philadelphia, 1,670; to points east of Connellsville, 1,775 cars.

The producing capacity of the coke region has apparently about been reached and operators are predicting $1.20 coke in the near future. Circuit price stands now at $1.34; foundry, $1.60; coked, $1.65.

John Goddard William Freeman and his son in the company hall at Greensburg. Goddard paying life penalty for the murder of Gertrude Timmons at Mount Pleasant on July 25, 1894, and Freeman being executed for killing Max Slaughter over a crimp at Moorewood on October 24, 1894.

Hiram Punnett, one of the best known residents of Murklevings, died as the result of being thrown from a buggy. The Connellsville Wheelmen held a meet at Athletic Park by electric light.

Sergeant H. A. Crow and Private Robert Shaffer of Company D win a place on the state rifle team as the result of the tenth Regimental shoot at Fayette.

PETEY DINK—Better Try It With a Fiver for a While, Petey.

Miss Rose Leader, Contralto, To Be Heard at Chautauqua

MISS ROSE LEADER.

Look For Dishonest Measures.
The north plaza of the city hall, New York, which was stacked high with all kinds of weights, must surely have caved in were it not for one thing. The weights were false. They were not as heavy as they looked. They were not honest weights.

That is the reason they were there, for it was weights and measures week, and Commissioner Joseph Hartigan of the mayor's bureau of weights and measures had placed all the dishonest baskets and pails and scopes and balances and other weighing paraphernalia which his inspectors had confiscated in public view that passersby might see and become wise.

One of the prize fakes was a five gallon oil can, so constructed that it contained but one quart of oil. It was said that the enduser who descended this did not mean to be dishonest. He had a grudge against John D. Rockefeller and feared that he would not let any one use his oil, like the Irishman who bought a ticket and then walked to get square with the railroad.

Another infernal machine was a large ice scale which gave only thirty-five pounds when it registered 100. When the leeman was arrested he sold the ice had melted on the way up the dumbwaiter.

On one side of the exhibit was a pile of baskets, such as are used to measure fruit and vegetables, while on the other a large stack of short weight paper containers gave more evidence of the fortunes to be made in the ice trade business. A prominent confectioner accused of possessing these containers asserted that he only used them when selling to cream and water kegs to young ladies, as he could not bear to see them injure their complexion.

An interesting balance was one with a wire attached, connected through a hole in the counter with two weights weighing eighteen ounces below. By this device an ostensible five pounds of coffee beans in reality only three pounds fourteen ounces.

While this exhibition was exposed to the elements, safely housed in the third floor of the Municipal building in Commissioner Hartigan's office, was a display of correct and proper scales and measures of all sorts. At this office the comis-sioner is busy organizing what is known as the Consumers League. Already 61,000 women have joined this organization, and by the end of three months the bureau expects the enrollment will be more than 200,000. This league, composed of housewives, will spread the program of honest weights and measures by insisting on them when making their purchases.

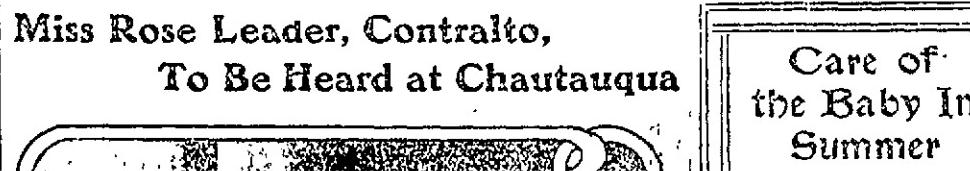

When Ice Cream Sticks.
Ice cream is sometimes frozen so hard that it does not come out of the mold easily. When this happens let the cold water run over the outside of the can. The water is so much warmer than the ice cream that it melts it sufficiently to start it out and does not melt it enough to spoil the shape of the mold.

How to Clean Mattings.
When mattings are soiled rub it with a soft damp cloth dipped in lukewarm salt water. Rub the spots with molten cornstarch; then go over the whole surface again with salt water, this time cold. Wipe with a dry cloth. This method of cleaning does not turn the matting yellow, as water usually does.

If You Need More Fat.
If your physician advises you to eat more fat than your diet includes, spread a thin coat of cream, butter, olive oil, bacon, walnuts, peanut nuts, egg yolks, suet, salt pork, salmon and beef and mutton fat. All these foods contain a very large percentage of fat.

Cleaning Mackintoshes at Home.
Spread the mackintosh out flat on the table and scrub with warm water and yellow soap, in which a little emulsion of ammonia has been dissolved. If use cold water and hang in the air to dry. On no account put it near the fire.

Prepared by the children's bureau, United States department of labor.
Food For the "Runabout" Baby.

For the first nine months or more of a baby's life, when he is growing at a very rapid rate, nature has provided a perfect food in mother's milk. With each baby a healthy development usually goes steadily forward with little trouble. But after being weaned all too many babies seem to suffer from a set-back, while accommodating themselves to digest a new food.

A list of the foods suitable to this period of the baby's life is given in greater detail in a bulletin called "Infant Care," published by the children's bureau of the department of labor, Washington. This publication is sent free to all who care to ask for it, sending their name and address to the bureau.

The average healthy baby of one year of age should be taking five meals a day at four hour intervals. At this period he should have about one ounce of milk daily. In addition he may have well cooked cereal twice a day, squeezed beef juice or broth once a day, some fruit juice once or twice a day, unless the bowel is loose, and dry bread or toast to eat.

As the baby grows and thrives various things may be added to his diet.

The following is a sample menu for a day for a healthy child from eighteen months to two years old (one ounce is two tablespoonsfuls).

1 a.m.—Milk, 6 to 10 ounces; pieces of zwieback, toast or dried bread.

2 a.m.—Orange juice, 2 ounces.

10 a.m.—Cereal, 2 tablespoonsfuls; cupful of milk; toast or dry bread.

12 noon—Beef juice or broth, meat, 1 tablespoonful; vegetables, 1 tablespoonful; stale bread, 1 slice; boiled apples, 1 tablespoonful.

1 p.m.—Cereal, 1½ tablespoonsfuls; milk, 1 cup; toast or bread.

3 p.m.—Milk, 8 ounces in cup. May be omitted.

The following rules for cooking and preparing certain of these articles may be helpful to mothers:

Toast.—Break one day old, cut in very thin slices; slices placed on edge in a toasting rack in an oven to dry.

Lovage.—Leave door partly open.

Broth.—Of round steak, one pound; of water, one pint. Put the meat on in cold water and allow it to come to a boil; then lower the flame so that it barely simmers for three or four hours. Remove the meat and add enough water to make up to the original amount of liquid; strain through a wire sieve and set aside to cool. When cold the fat is removed in a soft piece, leaving a clear liquid or jelly. Heat a small portion when it is time to feed the baby; keep the jelly covered and on ice.

Steak.—One tablespoonful.

Take meat, round or sirloin steak, seared with a silver spoon. When you have the desired amount shaped into a pat and boil on a hot, dry spider. When done add a little salt. Or a piece of rare round or sirloin steak, the outer part having been cut away, is scraped or shredded with a knife.

Spinach.—Cook spinach in salted water until tender. Pour cold water over it and drain. Then rub through a fine sieve.

Baked Apple.—Apple baked three-quarters of an hour; skin and core removed; two tablespoonsfuls of pulp strained through a fine sieve.

Cereal (hour preparations).—Cereal preparation three-quarters of a cupful cooled with one quart of water for three-quarters of an hour in a double boiler. Add enough water to keep moist.

Oatmeal.—Have a pint of water boiling in the top of the double boiler; add one-half teaspoonful of salt and drop in gradually one-half cupful of oatmeal flakes, stirring all the while. Cool for three hours and strain through a wire sieve. Pour on it one or two ounces of milk.

The following are some of the things a baby should not have: Candy, cakes, doughnuts, pastry, fresh bread, griddle cakes, syrup or molasses, pork or tough meat of any kind, bananas, overripe fruits, pickles, tea, coffee, soda water or beer nor tastes of foods from the family table.

The Price

There was no inclosing fence on the Meridian border of the boulevard, and under the nearest of the lawn oaks there were rustic park seats. Jasper Griswold's single concession to the public when he had bought for and secured his property right-of-way through to the lake's margin, Griswold turned aside and sat down on one of the benches. The disappointment was growing less keen. He was beginning to understand that he had made no allowance for the eternal feminine in the idealized Fidella—for the tomfool and the straitly human. But the disheartenment remained. Should he stay and fight it out? Or should he take pity upon the poor prisoner of the conventions and seek to postpone the day of reckoning by flight?

He had not fitted the answer to either of these sharp-pointed queries when a pair of light-fingered hands came from behind to clasp themselves upon his eyes, and a well-known voice said, "Guess."

"Margery," he said, and she laughed with the joyous unconstraint of a happy child and came around to sit by him.

"I was doing time out on the veranda, and I saw you down here in the moonlight, looking at it you had lost something," she explained, adding, "Haven't you?"

"I don't know; can you tell that which you've never had?" he returned musingly. And then: "Yes; perhaps I did lose something. Don't ask me what it is. I hardly know myself."

"You have just come from Doctor Brotlin?" she inquired.

"Yes."

"And Charlotte doesn't want to marry you?"

"Heavens and earth!" he exploded. "Who put the idea into your head that I wanted to marry her?"

"You do!"—calmly.

"Then, for pity's sake, let me take it out, quick. If I were the last man on earth, Miss Farnham wouldn't marry me; and if she were the last woman, I think I'd go drown myself in the lake!"

The young woman of the many metamorphoses was laughing again, and this time the laugh was a bitter-perfect imitation of a schoolgirl's glee.

"My!" she said. "How dreadfully hard she must have sat on you!"

"Please don't laugh," he pleaded; "unless you are the heartless kind of person who would laugh at a funeral, I'm down under the hoots of the hawks, at last, Margery, girl. Before you came, I was wondering if the game were at all worth the candle."

Her mood changed in the twinkling of an eye. "The battle is over, and won," she said, speaking softly. " Didn't you know that?" And then: "Oh, boy, boy! but it has been a desperate fight! Time and again I have thought you were gone, in spite of all I could do!"

"You thought—I was gone? Then you knew?"

"Of course I know; I have known ever since the first night; the night when I found the money in your suitcase. What a silly, silly thing it was for you to do—to leave the Bayou State Security slip in the packings!"

"But you said—"

"No, I didn't say; I merely let you believe that I didn't see them. After that, I knew it would be only a question of time until they would trace you here, and I hurried; oh, I hurried! I made up my mind that before the struggle came, all Wahaska should know you, not as a bank robber, but as you are, and I made it come out just that way. Then Mr. Brofflin turned up, and the fight was on. He shadowed you, and I shadowed him—and had Johnnie Ferguson do it for me. I know he'd try Miss Farnham first, and there was only one hope there—that she might fall in love with you and no refuse to give you away. She did, didn't she?"

"Most emphatically, she did not," he smiled. "You have greatly misjudged

"You have heard it all, Margery. You know what I thought I was, and what I have turned out to be. I'm afraid I am just a common crook, after all; there doesn't seem to be standing room anywhere else for me. But every living fiber of me, the good and the bad, loves you—loves you!"

"What do I care for anything else?" she flushed back. "You are you. Kenneth dear; that is all I know, and all I care for. If you had stolen all the money in the world, and had killed a dozen men to make your getaway, it would be just the same. Only—"

"Only what?" he demanded jealously. "It would be just the same to me—but—but . . . Oh, boy, dear! It will never, never be the same to you!" "I—I don't understand," he stammered.

"Some day you will. You call yourself a crook—man, man! there isn't a crooked drop of blood in you! Don't I know? You persuaded yourself that you had a right to take this money; perhaps you did have; I don't say you didn't. When I see anything I want, I reach out and take it, if I can—and I guess most people would, if they dared. But you are different; you are good. Some day all those dreadful things that have come tagging along after the fact will rise up and gnash their teeth at you and tell you that it was a sin, a crime. And then—oh, boy, dear! then I shall lose you!"

Very real he took her in his arms again; and for a time all things sensible and tangible, the deserted driveway, and the plashing of the little waves on the sand, the starling moonlight and the stenciled shadows of the oaks, were forgotten in the great soul-bounding silence that wrapped them about and enveloped them.

"Margery," he began, when the interval of thoughtful heart-searching and done its illuminative work, "what would you say if I should tell you that your 'some day' has already come?"

"Why can't I?"

"Just because you can't," Griswold went on argumentatively; "I know the facts of this robbery you speak of; a great many people know them. The newspaper accounts said at the time that there were three persons who could certainly identify the robber, the president, the passing toller, and a young woman. It so happens that all three of these people are at present in Wahaska. At different times you have appealed to each of them, and in each instance that you have been turned down, isn't that true?"

Brofflin glanced up, scowling.

"It's true enough that you—you and the little black-eyed girl between you—have hoodooed the whole bunch!" he rasped. "But when I get you into court, you'll find that there are others."

Griswold smiled good-naturedly.

"That is a bold, bad bluff, Mr. Brofflin, and nobody knows it any better than you do," he countered. "You haven't a leg to stand on. This is America, and you can't arrest me without a warrant. And if you could, what would you do with me without the support of at least one of your three witnesses? Nothing—notting at all!"

Brofflin laid the pistol on the table, and put the key of the safety box beside it. Then he sat in grim silence for a full minute, toying idly with a pair of handcuffs which he had taken from his pocket.

"It's the Price, boy, dear; I don't ask you to pay it. Listen: My father and I have agreed to disagree, and he has turned over to me a lot of money that he took from—that was once my mother's brother's share in the Colorado gold claims. What is mine is yours. We can pay back the money. Will that do?"

He was shaking his head slowly.

"No," he said, "I think it wouldn't do."

"I was afraid it wouldn't," she sighed, "but I had to try. Are they still gnawing their teeth at you?—the dreadful things, I mean?"

He did not answer in words, but she knew, and held her peace. At the end of the ends he sprang up suddenly and drew her to her feet.

"It's the Price, boy, dear; I can't ask you to walk and afterward to marry a cousin. Think of it—even if Galbraith was willing to withdraw, the law wouldn't let him, and I'd get the limit; anything from seven years to fifteen or more. Oh, my God, no! I can't pay the price! I can't give it!"

She put her arms around his neck and drew his head down and kissed him on the lips. "I'll wait . . . oh, boy, boy! I'll wait! But I can neither push you over the edge nor hold you back. Only don't think of me; please, please don't think of me!"

He did not answer in words, but she knew, and held her peace. At the end of the ends he sprang up suddenly and drew her to her feet.

"I can't do it, Margery, girl. I can't ask you to walk and afterward to marry a cousin. Think of it—even if Galbraith was willing to withdraw, the law wouldn't let him, and I'd get the limit; anything from seven years to fifteen or more. Oh, my God, no! I can't pay the price! I can't give it!"

She put her arms around his neck and drew his head down and kissed him on the lips. "I'll wait . . . oh, boy, boy! I'll wait! But I can neither push you over the edge nor hold you back. Only don't think of me; please, please don't think of me!"

"I'm afraid it wouldn't," she sighed, "but I had to try. Are they still gnawing their teeth at you?—the dreadful things, I mean?"

He did not answer in words, but she knew, and held her peace. At the end of the ends he sprang up suddenly and drew her to her feet.
